EDITORIAL FLINGS

The fellow who plays A saxophone By all means ought to Live alone.

You can and you can't. You will and you won't. You'll be darned if you do. You will be darned if you don't. Take it as you like it. Either way the end is the same. This applies very particularly to the auto speeding passion that prevades Paris autoists at present.

The discovery that dogs may be vaccinated against rabies simplifies procedure. The plan has been to let the dog have the rabies and then let the human victim have twenty-four "shots" after shooting the dog that had rabies and bit the man.

The Japanese take their shoes off when they get into a theatre. The American pay tip-top prices for theatre tickets and demand that everything that is to be taken off be taken off by the girls who are hired by the producer with that understanding.

Mary had a little curl It hung beside her ear But when she went to bed It hung upon her chiffonier.

"Give us cars and we'll give you coal," say the Kentucky operators, and to this they add: "Prices of coal, as of all other necessities, will be governed by the laws covering supply and demand." Which is to say that when coal is plentiful in the market the price is low and when scarce in the markets the price is high.

The strange case of a Chicago canary who was presented with a mate and straightway killed her is reported. But what would you do if you lived in a cage and couldn't escape, and if a wife not of your own choosing were presented to you, and if there were no means of getting a divorce for incompatibility, and if there were no law making murder a capital offense?

When I see some kids acting fresh, By the bye I'm very glad that I'm just A middle-aged guy.

A Louisville paper is printing short installments of the Bible as a special attraction. The editor says they are the most popular things that the paper prints, and that the subscribers read the installments as eagerly as they would read chapters of a popular novel. The moral is: Read the International Sunday School lessons in THE NEWS each Friday.

A back-to-nature costume has become very popular in California. But what we want to say is what do they call some of the styles they are wearing on the streets of Paris?

A Cincinnati paper advertises a hunting and fishing editor as well as a yachting editor. To the uninitiated the titles will indicate that in journalism the less work you do the more you're appreciated by the employer.

The Youngstown, O., Telegram evidently got its fish market reports and the reports of Jack Pickford's wedding mixed up, as part of the item regarding Marilyn's marriage read as follows: "Marilyn's wedding gown was of white georgette, trimmed with silver princess lace, and she carried a gorgeous bouquet of white orchids, sardines and lillies of the valley." Sounds kinder fishy, hey?

IS DIXIE HIGHWAY BAD?

There seems to be a lot of kicking about the condition of the Dixie Highway in Kentucky and tourists complain that the road that links the North and South has been allowed to deteriorate until it is well nigh impassable at some points. No stretch of the Dixie Highway is being more strongly criticized than that within the city limits of Louisville, which has become the subject of jest on the vaudeville stage.

It would seem that Louisville can ill afford the advertising that goes with a vaudeville skit, when referring to the Dixie Highway, a comedian asks his partner how he found the road and to get for answer: "Fine until I got to Eighteenth street."

MAYSVILLE'S KENTON MONUMENT UNFINISHED

The citizens of Maysville established a new cemetery with an artificial mound in the center designated as the location for a monument to Simon Kenton, the pioneer and first settler of Maysville and of Northern Kentucky; they raised the funds to pay for the monument, decided upon its plan, and obtained the consent of his only surviving son, February 6, 1849, of McCord, a son-in-law, and the other members of the family, to the removal of the remains from Ohio to the spot thus proposed. The purpose was subsequently abandoned, for reasons unexplained.

In December, 1885, thirty-nine years after his death, the remains of Simon Kenton were removed and reinterred, with appropriate ceremonies, at Ookedale Cemetery, Urbana, Ohio.

A COMPLIMENT TO THE PRESS.

Mr. Kahn, upon reaching home from a three months sojourn in Europe, and upon being asked to give his impressions to the country, declared that the American people are fully informed of whatever is transpiring in the Old World, and have the opportunity through the press to get such an intelligent grasp of the economic and political situation, that there is very little that a returning traveler can say which will throw any additional light on the problems of Europe.

The European himself, says Mr. Kahn, is not as well informed about the situation over there as the American who reads carefully his own newspaper.

Mr. Kahn goes on: "Without wishing, in any way, to belittle the principal papers of Europe, I can say in all honesty, that one of the impressions which invariably result from my journeys to Europe, is the vivid recognition of the amazing excellence and comprehensiveness of the news service of the leading American papers."

This is a high but well deserved compliment. Lord Northcliffe gained his great journalistic and publishing triumphs by frankly recognizing the superiority of American methods and introducing them into England, making the London Daily Mail a newspaper for the people, and within reach of all, as his first great experiment.

The progress of America in many directions, and especially in the more universal spread of knowledge and interest in public affairs and world movements, is due to a considerable extent to the rapid development and greater excellence of the press in this country over anything known in Europe.

But only those who have made the comparison, as Mr. Kahn has done, can realize just how wide is the gulf which separates the press of the United States from that of continental Europe, at least.

GAME PLENTIFUL

With the approach of the fall hunting season, sportsmen are beginning to cast longing eyes toward the fields where the quail "pipe their lays, and whistle down the wind" and are looking up prospects. Farmers throughout the county report having at various times, seen several large flocks of quail in their fields. The rabbit crop, as usual, will be a large one. In some sections they are already in evidence in large numbers. Reports from surrounding counties indicate that quail will be more plentiful this fall than at any time during the past ten years, showing the wisdom of protection in the closed season.

BOURBON CASES IN COURT OF APPEALS

At the next term of the Court of Appeals, which begins soon, the following cases, which were appealed from Bourbon county, will be heard: Crowe vs. McLeary; Lyon's guardian, etc., vs. Lyon's executors, etc., Young, etc., vs. Daniels, etc.

PARIS BELIEVES IN PLAY AS WELL AS WORK

Paris believes in play. We realize the virtue of recreation and exercise. We believe in public gatherings, with people getting together for relaxation and the joy of comradeship. We encourage our youngsters to play. We boost for every kind of sport. We want our base ball team, our foot ball team, and all our other athletic organizations to be a part of our civic life; to play the game on the square for the love of the play, and the honor of the sport rather than for any prize of victory. Our people keep young by association with the children. We have found that to be one of the real recipes for contentment and long life.

"REUNION WEEK" AT THE STATE FAIR

Louisville will be a city of reunions during State Fair week, September 11 to 16, according to plans which have been announced by the Young Business Men's League, which has made plans to help those who have separated to "get together."

The week has been designated as "Home Coming and Re-union Week" by the members of the league, which plans to hold reunions of all kinds. Among the most interesting of the reunions to Kentuckians are to be those of former State Administrations and Legislatures. These are to be held September 14, "Governor's Day."

The administrations of Governor Edwin P. Morrow, Governor Stanley, Governor McCreary, Governor Willson, Governor Beckham and of Governor Bradley are to be represented. When the Chief Executive of the administration is living he has been named chairman of the reunion of officials, as have the living Lieutenant Governors and Speakers of the House of Representatives, of the reunions of their houses. A. J. Carroll has been named chairman for those of administrations prior to 1896. Ranking members of the Legislature and of the various administrations have been selected in cases where the Governor, Lieutenant Governors and Speakers are dead.

Military reunions of units which have represented Kentucky in the Mexican War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American and the World Wars, are also to be held, and booths at the State Fair grounds are to be maintained for each war and each distinctly Kentucky unit. Reunions of families and of colleges are included in the plans of the league as well as the designation of various days as "section reunion days," one for Southern, one for Western, one for Central and another for Eastern Kentucky.

LOCATE CHIDL

Through efforts of Patrolman Robert E. Lusk, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Smith, of Paris, have succeeded in locating their sixteen-year-old son, Leslie McClure Smith, who left his home several weeks ago to join a circus.

The circus was located at Pennsboro, West Virginia, Patrolman Lusk got in communication with the Pennsboro Chief of Police, who after making an investigation found young Smith. The boy was anxious to return home, saying circus life wasn't what it was cracked up to be, and that he had had as much of it as he wanted.

Money for young Smith's transportation to Paris was forwarded to the Pennsboro authorities, and the boy returned home Saturday sadder but wiser, and content to stay in "the old home town."

SAPIRO TO PUSH LEGAL ACTIONS

Aaron Sapiro, general counsel of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association, will be personally in charge of the association's case against Garrett Watts, Fayette county farmer, when it comes up in the Bourbon Circuit Court at the fall term, according to information given out at the association's offices. Mr. Sapiro, who has been on a tour of the dark tobacco district of Kentucky and Tennessee, is in Lexington.

Mr. Sapiro said that the California Bean Growers' Association, another of the Sapiro organizations, has won a judgment for $21,000 against the Bridge Land Company, a big bean-growing corporation of California, for damages and counsel fees in a similar case, the company having broken its contract to deliver its product to the association.

"I consider it of vital importance," said Mr. Sapiro, "that the few men who have violated their contract to deliver their tobacco be not allowed to get away with it. If they will not voluntarily keep their contracts, there is a law in Kentucky, which compels them to do so."

YOU GOTTA ADVERTISE

No matter what your product is, —how useful it may be, Your sales will not amount to much if it's unknown to me.

The Buying Public is my name and I can't realize The merits of the things you make unless you advertise!

Modesty's a virtue, but in business not at all. Humanity like foolish pride is bound to cause a fall.

Honesty in industry and lots of enterprise, Are finest business virtues—but you'll have to advertise!

The very best of quality— a price that can't be beat— And still your cleverest salesmen are flirting with defeat.

If you don't use publicity to put the public wise You're going to be sorry that you didn't advertise!

They say there are no old ruins in this country. Page Chanucey Depew and Williams Jennings Bryan!

PINEVILLE WILL HAVE STATE FISH HATCHERY

With the completion of the new fish hatchery at Glasgow, Barren county, which is now being put into shape for hatching fish next spring, the Kentucky game and fish commission will undertake the construction of the third State hatchery at Pineville, in Bell county.

This plan was announced by Dr. R. S. Tuttle, executive agent of the game and fish commission, from Glasgow, where he has been superintending the construction of the new hatchery. The first hatchery is located at Forks of Elkhorn, Franklina county.

Since the first of the year the commission has distributed approximately 96,000 fish and before the close of the season it expects to place at least 100,000 more in the streams and ponds of Kentucky.

Dr. Tuttle and Mr. Meredith, accompanied by Mrs. Tuttle and Mrs. Meredith, have gone to Madison, Wis., to attend the international Association of Game and Fish and Conservation Commissioners and the meeting of the American Fisheries Society.
